

Brothers, arrested, injure 3 policemen

NORTH BRUNSWICK — Three police officers received hospital treatment for injuries suffered in a scuffle outside the City Limits bar — a scuffle that continued with the suspects at police headquarters.

Police said three men had smashed a car window outside the bar and broke a railing outside the building on Route 130 at 11:20 p.m. Sunday.

When police arrived, one suspect ran away but the other two, brothers James Cabell, 18, and Michael Cabell, 22, both of Byron Road, began fighting with police and tried to kick out the window of a police car, according to authorities. OCT. 15 1990

While in the back seat of the police car, James Cabell smashed his face repeatedly against the security screen and then spat blood at the officers, police said.

At headquarters, Lt. Ron Adams was bitten on the finger, almost to the bone, and may suffer permanent nerve damage, according to police.

Patrolman Steve Dunkel suffered a neck injury and Patrolman Frank Tocci a wrist injury. Along with Adams, they were released after treatment at Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital. Patrolman John Garback, who also was involved in the melee, was not injured, police said.

The Cabell brothers have been charged with three counts of aggravated assault on police, and with criminal damage and resisting arrest, and face additional charges pending a review of the case, police added.
